At the time when "the Arab Spring" begins in Tunisia and Egypt, Fouzi, an Algerian filmmaker, gathers his actors to show them the incomplete cut of the film he made two years prior about the disenchantment of a youth seeking to express his artistic ideas, seeking an alternative ending. While the country is suddenly lifted by a wave of protests, the director and his actors start questioning the very purpose of creation as an act of resistance in Algeria.

A couple, separated for the past 15 years, find themselves together again for the duration of a two day journey to go and get their son, hospitalized in another country after a serious ski accident. What do they still feel for one another, indifference, rancor, jealousy? Or perhaps complicity, friendship and, who knows, love. This light-hearted road movie, which takes us from Brussels to the summit of the Alps, will allow us to discover two profoundly sincere beings for whom we can only feel affection.
